

Hello,

Thanks for reaching out to us at PepsiCo. Your email and letters to Mr. Andrew were shared with us for response.

Your passion, dedication, and deep understanding of this very important topic is evident in all of your messages. We truly appreciate consumers working together to bring positive change to our environment, and are happy to share it's a passion that we at PepsiCo share.

As you mentioned in your note, as part of our pep+ (PepsiCo Positive) transformation to embed sustainability at the core of our business, we have set new goals aiming to cut virgin plastic per serving by 50% across our global food & beverage portfolio by 2030. Currently 87% of our packaging is recyclable, reusable, compostable or biodegradable as we work towards our goal of 100% by 2025.

You might be interested to know that we're also working to reinvent packaging materials and scaling innovative packaging solutions. We're investing in breakthrough food packaging technology and business models that go "Beyond Film" (e.g. foods packaging), including bulk dispensing and using alternative circular materials. We're also now introducing a fully compostable bag made with plant-based materials. Starting with Off The Eaten Path, one of Frito-Lay's plant-based brands, this industrially compostable packaging is available to consumers in the U.S. at Whole Foods stores. Your recommendation for us to create sustainable packaging that other companies could utilize is a good suggestion, and one we've actually started working on. We announced we'd be willing to work with other companies to license the same technology at no cost given the importance of creating a circular food packaging system.

*Driving systemic change around the world is critical to achieving our vision of a world where packaging never becomes waste. We hope this information is helpful. Thanks again for writing.

*Best Regards,
